Convert multiple TXT files to CSV files, even if they are encrypted Convert multiple TXT files to CSV files Convert multiple TXT files to CSV files Q: How to get the XML data returned by a service into a C# application? I have created a very simple C# XML service that returns the latest 100 lines of log data in XML format. I've implemented a POST/GET web service and have put the WSDL up on my website in SOAPUI. On a separate page, I have a simple C# app that just needs to get this service's XML data into a List. I don't know how to get the XML data into the List in C#. Is there a simple.NET trick or does this require creating a custom XML deserializer? It seems like a common scenario, but I can't find a good example or any examples of this at all. A: Create a web service that returns a collection of serialized objects. (I think System.Xml.Serialization is what you want) Now, in your client code, you can use the SerializeObject method to serialize and deserialize your collection of objects: var objectAsXml = service.GetObjects(); var xml = XmlConvert.SerializeObject(objectAsXml); Cross-reactivity between pollen and food. We have studied the relationship between pollens and food allergens in a panel of patients allergic to pollens and/or foods. Among 4,542 subjects sensitized to grass, ragweed and/or barley, 1,917 (42.3%) had symptoms due to pollens alone, 593 (13.7%) to pollens and foods, and 474 (10.9%) to pollens and/or foods. Food-specific IgE was found in 936 patients (20.8%), with a mean value of 3.1 kU/l. In another 287 patients (6.4%) food-specific IgG was detected. The incidence of sensitization to foods increased with age, reaching up to 50% at 40 years of age. In the sensitization to foods, the patients with pollinosis (21.8%) showed a higher incidence of symptoms than patients with non-allergic rhinitis (14.2%). Cross-reactivity
