computer. Startup Watcher is a boot manager that lets you automatically delete or re-enable any programs that are accidentally deleted, and its advanced features allow you to monitor and save any of the programs you add to the list. Startup Watcher allows you to quickly scan your computer's boot list for startup programs that have been deleted and re-enable them for the next reboot. Startup Watcher is also robust and reliable, helping you automatically delete programs that are not installed any longer, or are not useful any longer on your computer, such as browser extensions or the web browser itself.

Advertisements Startup Watcher reviews
This reboot manager is simple to use and makes it easier for you to manage your startup programs. I really like the fact that it not only configures it for you and updates the list according to whatever programs you have on your computer, but it also allows you to delete programs from there too, which would be a shame not be able to do in some of the other programs I've used. However, the main thing I really like about it and the reason I can't rate it anything less than 5/5 stars, is that it also saves the list to the registry. Now, having said that, this can make your computer quite a bit slower to start as well, depending on what programs you have installed. It's definitely worth a shot though if you have the time and really want to manage your startup programs and ensure that all of the programs are up and running when you start your computer. Having said that, I really like it and can confidently recommend it to anyone who wants to manage their boot list. I love the fact that with this program you can

Startup Watcher is a free boot manager with an intuitive and easy to use interface. With Startup Watcher, you can easily organize and manage your favorite applications that start with your computer, by adding them to your boot list. This way, the applications will be automatically started with your computer every time you start it, keeping the order in which you added them. The only condition is that the applications must be added to the bootlist manually. To that end, this tool allows you to remove any application that you no longer want to start when you start up your computer, by simply adding it to the program's unwanted software list. You can easily access and manage any application that you want your computer to start, as the Boot List allows you to access up to 99 different programs that you added to it. Once you open the list, you can easily access the list of all of your programs by simply pressing "Open all". If you want a certain application to start up with your computer, then simply add it to your program's list. The program will delete any startup applications
