Update: Autodesk has discontinued Autodesk Markup Assistant. This has been removed from the Autodesk 2020 release of AutoCAD and marked as a pre-release feature. In AutoCAD 2023, all drawing types that allow for markup will now have all drawing types that incorporate markup and style-based changes available to the entire drawing. Design space will be represented with planes and form, also allowing precise placement of a drawing's entities on the drawing space. Improved-quality annotations and more: The annotation features of AutoCAD will be updated to produce vector-based annotations and, at the same time, make them sharper, easier to edit, and remove their dependence on the viewport. A separate drawing area for annotations will be introduced. This will be linked to the drawing area so that when you edit an annotation, the change automatically applies to all active drawings. Annotations will be color-coded. Users can filter annotations by the color scheme that applies to all drawings in the drawing area. Accessibility: A Mac (OS X) version of Autodesk-dia, AutoCAD's drawing viewer, is being developed. AutoCAD will be released on a new platform: the CAPI (Code Access Platform Interface). CAPI provides an interface between the AutoCAD applications and AutoCAD engine for generating drawing files. Users will no longer need to depend on the drawing viewers for AutoCAD; instead, they can create drawings with AutoCAD straight from within their operating system. In AutoCAD, the application menu has been replaced with a dialog box that facilitates navigation. What's new in AutoCAD Cloud: AutoCAD Cloud will be launched with AutoCAD 2023. The team has been hard at work to ensure that this version of the cloud architecture will deliver better support and wider functionalities than previously available with AutoCAD Cloud 2020. New features will include: Autodesk Signage, a set of platform-specific tools for creating, updating, and hosting digital signage. The application can be used to create and update digital content and deliver it to a variety of screen-based technologies including iOS, Android, Windows, and Mac OS. Automation options and scripting languages. Support for PowerCLI, PowerShell, and Python, and improvements to the underlying model definition of the Cloud API, will enable
