The Geosys™ software is a suite of specialized tools designed to facilitate geoscientific applications for local and regional governments. It is sold as a unit, with a single user license, but each tool (and individual user of the tools) may have separate licenses. Tools include GEOspatial, a map and database tool; GESSY, a dynamic map product that can be used in an interactive context; and FIELDLAB, a multi-user, web-based application for scientific visualizations and geospatial data processing. GEOspatial: Fieldwork and database management are an essential part of any scientific study. GEOspatial is an interactive GIS workflow tool designed to help users manage field and database information and create topologies and maps. GEOspatial allows users to quickly and easily tag and label features, add geospatial information and create custom queries. Users also have the ability to manage and analyze data, and maintain and import database information. GESSY: GESSY is an interactive map product that can be used in a number of interactive map applications. In the most basic format, GESSY is a static map that can be used for geographic information retrieval. It is often used as a background map for map viewers or map viewers itself. In addition to static maps, GESSY can be used in an interactive application. By loading relevant data, including geographic information, users can query and manipulate information on the map. GESSY provides features such as points of interest (POIs), polygon and polyline boundaries, colors and symbols, and boundaries that are specified by data query (DQ). Custom DQ is the ability to provide the capability to move the map to a specific location or set of locations. This is sometimes referred to as an interactive map or an animated map. FIELDLAB: FIELDLAB is a web-based application that allows users to visualize, manipulate and analyze geospatial data within an interactive environment. FIELDLAB has many unique features including: Flexible and powerful Vector, topological and raster data types Viewport, corner and zooming capabilities Segmentation, including by Boolean, category and distance-to-geometries User-defined geometries Mapping of custom or user-defined grids Vector-based add-ins that can import shapefiles or use ESRI shape

: Figura Del Norte Quite often I have read some of the predictions that I have posted here and realized that they are not too far off from what was actually happening. Examples from the past are that Gulf War I started on January 16, 1991, and ended on March 28, 1991. The International Monetary Fund had projections on how the world would change this year by the year 2000. As of this year, 2007, we are right on time, except that the world is heading into deflation, as opposed to the IMF's forecast of being re-inflated by the year 2000. In this article I will post an assessment of this "new" world we are in and analyze what I can see and project for the next "new world." Everyone who knows anything about Figura Del Norte scoffs at the idea that the 0.2% or 0.8% loss of wealth that happened in the last year can be predicted to happen again the next year and the next year until the year 2030. However, just observe how much the GDP increased in 2006 as opposed to the figures of the previous year and 2007 is only going to become more successful and the next year is not far as an indication. (As pointed out by J.R. in a post to my article, "If Our Man on the Moon Can See The Future, Why Can't You?" found at the bottom of this article, we must remember that Russia had a GDP growth rate of +4.3% in the third quarter of 2001 and in the fourth quarter that rate was up to a negative 0.2% only out of ten countries that participated). So what happened? The region had an average GDP growth rate of +3.4% from 1989 to 1997, a wave of political and social freedoms that is unique for its area of Central America and very popular for its tourists. Within the last year however, this number is down to +1.3% and that certainly isn't going to continue throughout the next year. But the worst of it was on June 26, 2006 when a bridge connected the region with Haiti, giving the region a new friend in the Great Power, who also has the technology of communication, that is more about the Internet. This region now has the potential for double number growth than
