===== Rhabdomyolysis is the destruction of skeletal muscle cells causing elevated levels of muscle enzyme proteins in the blood. Rhabdomyolysis can occur in association with muscle injury \[@B1\], metabolic diseases \[@B2\], infections \[@B3\] and drugs \[@B4\]. The hallmark of acute rhabdomyolysis (AR) is the presence of myoglobinuria \[@B5\], but myoglobinuria has been observed to occur without clinical complications \[@B1\]. Among the rare causes of rhabdomyolysis, 4-aminosalicylic acid (mesalazine) has been described as a rare cause of rhabdomyolysis in adults

\\[@B6\\]. In a small study, prolonged sulfasalazine therapy was associated with myoglobinuria, rhabdomyolysis and acute renal failure in patients with Crohn's disease \\[@B6\\]. To the best of our knowledge, no case of AR with prolonged mesalazine therapy has been described previously. A literature review identified only one previous report of mesalazine-induced rhabdom

Innovative gameplay - Superb storytelling - Hysterical Humor Gameplay A fast-paced murder mystery, with a simple objective - survive long enough to find out who killed your loved one. Elegos is a game that tasks players with exploring Macedon, Greece, in the aftermath of Alexander the Great's invasion. Available in two distinct but connected modes, Conquest and Adventure, the game is set in the Classical era, under the rule of Alexander the Great and his mother, Olympias, who collectively oversaw the brutal dismantling of city-states and the destruction of the Hellenic language. The story of Elegos follows a main character, tasked with investigating the mysteries of their own past. In a world of supernatural beings and magic, the story of Elegos is told through a combination of exploration, story-driven dialogue, and gameplay. When new characters are encountered, they will be integral to your quest to uncover your past, depending on their fates and what value you assign to them. The player in Elegos is given the freedom to decide on their own how to interact with the world, form allegiances, and carry out their investigation. Armed or unarmed, stealthy or violent, the player chooses how to approach situations and who to interact with. Through the lens of your own character, you may ultimately find yourself encountering allies, enemies, or neutral individuals. All of these interactions change how the world reacts to you, from a moral perspective, and how your choices affect your story. What's New in Version 0.11

Readers of Nature magazine have been baffled by a striking light show, described as “artificial colours of the rainbow”, which was captured in a photograph taken by one of the world’s leading experts on Antarctic astronomy. Eduard Ahrens, a science professor at the University of Rochester in New York, used a camera attached to his telescope to record a view of the polar star system and has likened the unique display to the intricate designs of exotic flowers. The light show lasted for 10 minutes on 31 January, captured above the horizon in one of the driest places on earth during a wet night, and then, almost instantly, shut down, returning the view to nearly normal, normal dark. Ahrens, a specialist in studies of the aurora borealis, has been particularly fascinated by the colour display, pointing out that it began with red and ended with blue, in keeping with the well-known theory of what causes the aurora, dubbed the “anomalous green flash". It is possible that the phenomenon could have been a case of fluorescent algae, something that has previously been seen in environments around the world, including in a Scottish river and a mountain lake in the US. However, given that there was no other colour alteration happening around the time of the display, this explanation is ruled out. Instead, Ahrens believes that the lights could have been a combination of sunlight entering his telescope's prism as well as the organic colours in nearby nature. "This was really unexpected," he said. "The beginning was a red glow with a little blue, and then the blue increased, then a little green and then blue again, and so on." The green portion of the display may have been the result of the ultra-violet light from an adjacent blaze of the aurora combined with the light of the digital camera. Ahrens said that he believes this is the first time that such an occurrence has been observed, and that this occurrence would be extremely difficult to recreate in a laboratory or indoors. "I was taken by surprise," he said. "It was a little bit like an alien light show." If the
