Your goal is to help others by providing a well-written, informative and contextual description of your science or favorite hobby. You can create a unique URL for each entry, and then promote your pages with a QR code. This is a great alternative to web posts, since it allows for the inclusion of links, images and videos. The application is extremely simple: you have to add a title, description, author, category, keyword and tags. All you have to do is type in the URL for the relevant page. You can also type in a title, description, category, author, keyword and tags for the URL of an article by copying and pasting it into the appropriate fields in the program. With the integrated tags system, you can tag pages by looking at the used tags from the history panel. You can check all the used tags from the List of Tags panel. Once you finished the entry, you can save it by clicking the "Submit" button. You can also submit an entry straight from the web browser. Additionally, if you link to a blog or press the "Send to Blog" button, the page will be published to your blog immediately. Does JASP help you maintain a relationship with your science or favorite hobby? The vast majority of science writers, fans and those interested in writing about science and their related hobbies use Weebly. The site provides a convenient way to combine and manage all of your media like videos, images, articles, pages or the title of the site. This JavaScript-based site builder can help you create a site that will work across multiple browsers, has a search option that allows you to find specific content, and has an easy-to-navigate structure. Weebly also has a mobile app for Android and iOS so you can write on-the-go from anywhere. The app is as simple as using the website but it comes with cool features like infinite scrolling and the ability to add media directly from the app. You can also check out what other users are creating and vote on content. Other Useful HTML5 Online Site Builders G2 Crowd is an online crowdsourcing application that allows users to rate and review software solutions that they use in their daily work. While the service is targeted at software engineers, there are plenty of business-oriented options available as well. G2 Crowd's rating system helps you pinpoint a vendor's quality, features and overall reputation. Companies can also login and view their reviews, submit feedback or add additional
