It followed a group of office workers as they attempted to make the transition to middle-management. It was somewhat controversial for its depiction of office life, which was intended to be humorous, and the more crass aspects of which were eventually censored for broadcast on BBC Two. The series was filmed in front of a live audience and filmed in a U.S. office rather than an English one. Main characters Each episode features a different set of characters. Danny Wainwright A senior manager who hates his job and office politics. He is portrayed as arrogant, and often comes across as unsympathetic. Dawn The office manager, played by Anita Dobson. She is the first colleague to break the rules and sympathise with Danny. She becomes his guide into the more mundane aspects of the office. Steve The Assistant Manager. Colin The cleaner, played by Alan Hansen. He is long-suffering, and often takes matters into his own hands. Dr. Love The voice coach of the office, played by Jim Broadbent. He dislikes office politics, and is often vocal about his criticism of the company. Andy The technology expert, played by Richard Ayoade. He is an outsider and a loner, although his lack of social skills do not usually seem too great an obstacle. He is a perfectionist, and often troubles himself over the detail of the office. Andrew The office joker, played by Harry Enfield. He has a slight sense of humour, and often comes up with a prank to cover up a boring situation. Keisha The senior receptionist, played by Sarah Jane Dry. She has a crush on Andy, but is in love with a much older man and gets upset when he rejects her. Bill The oldest member of the group. He enjoys recounting old war stories, and often acts as a confidant. Merri Mason The youngest member of the group. She is chosen to host a quiz show

If you did, it would be a prop, only reason it is in good shape is it was never used. Just my opinion. Native here...empty more likely to be a prop. The German makes are a common prop for Milwaukee. I have owned a few of these. As a former owner of a few and 5443 H&K's, I can tell you there is no way you could get anything into these things. I had a 544 HK once and once it was empty, or I had a 543 once but it was not empty.Q: What's the right way to handle high-reward/high-risk scenarios in online FPS games? EDIT: I'm not talking about games specifically, but more like every online game I've played in the past. I consider these games to not be zero-reward games, but rather high-risk games with high rewards. Let's put it this way: A good player could win over an average player if they use the same strategy with the same amount of time and effort. The only difference is that a good player knows what to do. In a majority of online games, you get one shot at a player before you lose the match. In other games, you can play forever. Like a shooter or a fighting game. The question is, when playing games like Counter-Strike, Battlefield, Call of Duty, what are the most efficient ways to play each game? In each game, there are different ways to win. Would it be better to try to do something specific in every game? Or is it better to go after the same strategy in each game, even if it leads you towards losing sometimes? I'm not talking about strategies against specific players, I'm talking about strategies for the whole game. In CS:S, there are 3 strategies: A very bad one. B as in Brutality. You slowly walk across a map, killing 5 players in 4 or 5 attempts. A somewhat bad 0cc13bf012
