Ethan B. Strimling, 42, of Bethlehem, Pa., who once worked for the government as a prosecutor in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, was found guilty of violating 18 U.S.C. § 1001(a)(2), according to the Justice Department’s statement. It said that prosecutors will seek sentencing of Strimling in March. Strimling, according to the statement, allegedly submitted false documents to the Justice Department when he was applying for a position in 2013. Strimling was denied the position, the Justice Department said, but, in 2014, he allegedly applied for the position again and allegedly submitted the same false information. Strimling, the Justice Department said, told his employer that he would not do anything illegal and that the information he provided was, in fact, true. He was indicted in December 2015. Strimling’s attorneys, Michael Abell, Joe M. Gullet Jr. and Bruce S. Marks, were surprised by the decision to find Strimling guilty. “I think it’s completely without merit and wrong,” Gullet told ProPublica, referring to the indictment. Strimling had been a full-time federal defender in the Middle District of Pennsylvania in 2013, according to court records. He was placed on leave in 2014 after prosecutors learned he had previously prosecuted a witness in a criminal trial for corruption, according to court records. Strimling’s attorneys said they had not seen evidence that he was responsible for preparing the misleading application. The statement said Strimling’s attorneys had challenged the wording of the indictment. “The government should be using its resources to investigate real crimes, not exploiting federal law to prosecute false statements,” Gullet told ProPublica. “There’s absolutely no obligation on him to turn himself in.” Spokespeople for the Justice Department and the United States Attorney’s Office for the Middle District e79caf774b

The board approved a zoning provision for the 230-acre area of land south of Acheson between St. Laurent Boulevard and Glenmore Trail. The original zoning allowed for density ranging from 80 to 110 dwelling units per hectare – an area equivalent to nearly seven or eight residential lots. The new zoning will allow density of up to 150 dwellings per hectare and provide 85-per-cent low-density residential zoning in the area. The board then approved the lease, which enables the C-Train’s private operator to add tracks and a maintenance building to a downtown-area storage facility. The transportation board heard from speakers at the meeting who supported and opposed both changes. Donna Dickens, who lives in an apartment building south of the proposed C-Train’s storage yard, said the proposal allows her building to stay in the area, and the station less than a block away would bring her apartment building closer to clients. “Our clientele is from the north of the city and she just want to keep us in their vicinity,” she said. “I’m afraid that the new zoning is really going to promote the development we can’t afford,” Dickens said. “I’m afraid we’re going to have to live through it.” Dickens said she would like to see more low-density housing development in the area as an alternative to the kind of housing she lives in. “It’s a big step, I know, but it’s the best step,” she said. “What we really want is affordable housing.” Claire Arnold, who lives in a building next to the proposed C-Train’s storage yard, said she’s concerned about the new zoning because it will
