Q: How can I make the default functions in finder and cp work on an entire directory? Let's say I have a folder ~/myfolder/ and I want it to copy/move/delete everything in it to somewhere else. What I usually do is to go to the myfolder folder in finder and copy everything to a new folder called ~/myfolder/backup, and then back to myfolder. Is there a way to make the default copy/move/delete functions work on an entire folder instead of having to go into each folder and use the separate functions?

A: An easy way to do it is to prefix the commands with ~/myfolder instead of myfolder This will run the command(s) in the directory ~/myfolder or use ~/myfolder if the directory was not found. The command ~/myfolder is the same as cd ~/myfolder ls so you see it works on its own (which will always be sufficient). For example $ tree ~/myfolder ~/myfolder |— subfolder1 |— subfolder2 2 directories, 2 files $ tree ~/myfolder/subfolder1 /h ome/codewarrior/myfolder/subf older1 |— file1 |— file2 2 directories, 2 files $ tree ~/myfolder/subfolder2 /home/co dewarrior/myfolder/subfolder2 ├── file1 └── file2 2 directories, 2 files If you want to remove the ~/myfolder directory before running the command on the directory you can run `rm -rf ~/myfolder` which removes the current directory and returns it to the previous state. Q: Change
