However, this issue has not been extensively investigated in high-risk youths. The present study was conducted to clarify spontaneous role transitions in a high-risk adolescent sample (n = 37, female:male = 21:16). Results revealed that negative behavior (e.g., physical aggression, truancy) was reported more often by those in the high-risk group than by those in the low-risk group (p < .05).

Q: Performance on 2 different cores I have a 3 questions about performance of app on different cores. I'm not sure whether there is a difference in performance between desktop and mobile application. I'm talking about not about multitasking (I mean running app on both cores at once). If application has only UIViewController, there isn't any view or other controls?

A: No, there is no difference in performance on desktop and mobile for the same app. No, you don't need any views to run on 2 cores at the same time. When you run an app, you will get two processes. One is the system process. The other is your app process. By default, your app process will run on the first core. You can't get around this. EODEN RING at the Action Games Games, as opposed to month, and the natural fluctuations in sales and stock price. Thus, as we stated in our findings above, we estimated trends by using the average of monthly variations in stock price from the daily stock price (from January 1996 to December 2013). The obtained time series from 1996 to 2013 with monthly data were further aggregated by using the mean of daily variables. The results of using the monthly and daily data are shown in Figures 3{ref-type="fig"} and 4{ref-type="fig"}, respectively. !(MJIRI-29-277-g003){#F3} ![(MJIRI-29-277-g004){#F4} The results of the analysis of stock price trends using monthly and daily data showed that the fluctuations in stock price are consistent in both cases. The results of the time series analysis using monthly data showed that the mean stock price did not decrease during the time period from January 1996 to December 2013. On the other hand, using the daily data, the mean stock price decreased sharply during the same time period, indicating that the fluctuations in daily data are more significant. Therefore, we can conclude that it is more reliable to estimate the fluctuations in the stock price through daily data. As shown in [Figure 4{ref-type="fig"}, the stock price showed a significant decline from February 2001 to January 2008. Based on our findings, the decline in the stock price was partially due to the long term introduction of ADAS technology in the vehicle industry and the decrease in the global trend toward adopting an electrified engine. In September 2008, the mean stock price reached its lowest point to date. This was based on the fluctuations in a stock market and was a result of the economic recession and the MERS epidemic. Finally, the results of stock price trend estimation showed that the mean stock price remained unchanged from January 1996 to December 2013. Therefore, this result is consistent with the result of the previous study, that is, no significant decline was observed in the stock price from January 1996 to December 2013
