I want to be able to get at a specific DataRow and then assign it's index and column to an int (using the data table as a searchable DB). I've seen this done using the following method, but this requires the DB connection string to be set at run time: DataTable dt = ds.Tables["TableName"]; DataRow row = dt.NewRow(); row["ID"] = 1; row["First Name"] = "Name 1"; row["Last Name"] = "Name 1"; row["Address"] = "Address 1"; row["Phone"] = "Phone 1"; dt.Rows.Add(row); The problem is this is done using the connection string. I'm thinking maybe there's some other method like this? A: You could use the OnNewRow event to write out the values to the new row in your DataTable and then loop through 6d1f23a050
